Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-3 and 5-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Cosman et al #5,116,654 in view of Matsumoto et al #5,201,988 or DE reference #31 51 523.

Cosman et al discloses a marking tape (10) comprising at least one passive resonant circuit having a selected resonance frequency (Col. 3 lines 63-65), each resonant circuit comprising an inductive coil and a capacitor whereby the inductive coils each having only a few windings, preferably one single winding, and having a sufficient size and dimensioning to be wireless(ly) detected when positioned in a hidden place such as an underground position (Col. 3, lines 66-68; Fig. 3).

Cosman et al does not disclose a given layer succession for the resonant circuit, being the following: the inductive coil being formed by a conductive material layer on one surface of a dielectric plastic film, and a capacitor being formed by a conductive layer on one side of the dielectric plastic film and an oppositely positioned conductive layer on the opposite side of the dielectric plastic film. This construction is one of the straightforward possible layer distributions of an LC circuit in the field of passive tags and markers. Matsumoto shows exactly this same layer distribution in a passive RF tag (See Fig. 4, Fig. 6, Fig. 17). It would have been obvious to provide the given layer succession for the resonant circuit as shown by Matsumoto, since doing so facilitate construction of a marking tape.

Cosman et al also does not disclose where the coil is printed on the dielectric film, and the capacitor is also deposited on the same layer side. DE '523 or the application represent merely well known design options for the realisation of the necessary LC circuit.

Allowable Subject Matter

3. Claims 4 and 12-14 objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
